TRANSLATOR NOTES

COMMON HONORIFICS

na honorific: Indicates familiarity or closeness; if used without permission or reason, addressing someone in this manner would constitute an insult.

-san: The Japanese equivalent of Mr./Mrs./Miss. If a situation calls for politeness, this is the fail-safe honorific.

-sama: Conveys great respect; may also indicate that the social status of the speaker is lower than that of the addressee.

-kun: Used most often when referring to boys, this indicates affection or familiarity. Occasionally used by older men among their peers, but it may also be used by anyone referring to a person of lower standing.

-chan: An affectionate honorific indicating familiarity used mostly in reference to girls; also used in reference to cute persons or animals of either gender.

-senpai: A suffix used to address upperclassmen or more experienced coworkers.

-sensei: A respectful term for teachers, artists, or high-level professionals.

PAGE 9

Radio calisthenics: In Japan, instructions for an exercise regimen are broadcast during the early morning over the radio and are used by schoolchildren, seniors, and even companies that wish to improve employees' overall health. During the summer vacation broadcasts, participants can keep track of their participation with stamp cards.

PAGE 41

Natto: An infamously healthy traditional Japanese food made from fermented soybeans. The fermenting process gives natto a distinct odor and a sticky web that stretches between the beans.

PAGE 140

The proprietress's hand gesture: The gesture that the restaurant owner is making with her thumb and forefinger means "money."

PAGE 146

Tōyaki: One of the ingredients in the daily lunch special is tōyaki, a fish-shaped pastry typically filled with sweet red-bean paste that's popular in Japan.

PAGE 156

Lolicon: A contraction of "Lolita Complex."

PAGE 160

Monthly Oregon Age: This is the monthly Japanese manga anthology in which the adaptation of High School DxD is serialized.
